GROUP QUICKLY CURED.

Don't Let The Child Choke to Death While Waiting For The Doctor.

Croup should have prompt treatment. The life of many a dear one has been sacrificed because the right remedy was not at hand.

Pay close attention to the child who is feverish, listless, and occasionally coughs dryly and shrilly. This is the first stage of croup, and instant treatment should be given.

Hymel, the miraculous, antiseptic dry air treatment, will cure croup in either the first or second stages. Easily inhaled, even when the breathing is irregular, it reaches more promptly than any other remedy the terribly inflamed membrane of the windpipe. Its soothing balsams act immediately, the inflammation is allayed, and the swelling reduced.

"Not long ago our little boy, Walter, awoke in the night with a bad attack of croup, so that he experienced great difficulty in breathing. We allowed him to inhale Hymel, and he immediately began to breathe easier, and in half an hour was fast asleep. Our children, being subject to croup, we feel safe with Hymel in the house, and I am glad to speak a good word for a remedy that will rob croup of its terrors."—Rev. Geo. Sisson, pastor of M. E. church, South Londonderry, Vt.

Hymel (pronounced High-mee) is the quickest acting and most sensible remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the nose, throat and lungs. It is guaranteed by The Red Cross Pharmacy to cure catarrh, coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis and croup, or money back. A complete outfit, including a neat hard rubber pocket inhaler, costs only $1.00. An extra bottle of Hymel, if afterwards needed, cost but 50 cents.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

"A Knight for a Day" at The Barre Opera House Tonight.

A three cornered comic love tangle an inning in "A Knight for a Day," the big New York-Chicago and Boston musical comedy success that comes to the opera house this (Friday) evening immediately following the close of the present all summer Boston run. The tangle has for its principals an awkward, simpering girl's college chum girl, and exuberant French chief attached to the seminary, and a merry little sweetheart of the slavery, who, a waiter by profession, is posing as a knight whose credentials he appropriated because the knight when waited upon, failed to reward the waiter with a tip. The slavery finds it pleasant to encourage both authors, and the squabbles that usually attend the dancing dalliance of two admirers become the experience of the trio.

"Uncle Dan" Tomorrow.

Uncle Dan and the Messen-r from Jarvis Section will be the offering at the opera house next Saturday matinee and night.

This is the play in which Barney McCauley and Mrs. Fiske first won such marked popular success for so many years. It tells a simple domestic story of New England life and has not a few genuinely effective dramatic situations. Several high class specialties are introduced throughout the piece. Special attention has been given the scenic and electrical effects. They do not write as good songs now-a-days as the old songs and Uncle Dan's proof that the real good plays of a few years ago were the "real goods." Band concert at noon.

For a large card party try an election An Election Euchre.

Each table has a ballot box for the votes won, and also a supply of colored slips to give out as votes when it loses; four people are at a table, and play for the party represented by their table. As in military euchre, one couple from each table goes to play each game at another table, and the remaining couple stays at their own table to play their visitors. Arrange so that the same couples do not play against each other more than once.

Regular bid euchre is played, and the losing couple must give one of their votes to the winners, which the latter will place in the ballot box on their own table. The length of time of each game is optional, but ought not to be more than seven or eight minutes. A regular schedule should be made for each table, which will tell the table to be visited each game, so that there will be no conflicts. Anyone who has played at a military euchre can do this.

Quaint place cards can be made which will assign the guests to the party for which they will play during the evening. Simple prizes, consistent with the election idea, such as horns, drums, etc., will prove the funniest. Have the refreshments carry out the idea of free lunches, such as cider, sandwiches, cheese, doughnuts, etc.

Score cards, posters, ballot boxes, etc., can all be easily made, and a great deal of fun will be in their originality.—Mary A. Menner in November Woman's Home Companion.

The Weary Business Man.
Jones is an operator; from 19 to 3 each day.

You'll find him very active in the Street. He's bustling this, or bearing that; makes puts and calls and such. And sometimes Jones attempts to corner wheat.

He is known as the Napoleon of the slippery simoleon.

Up his sleeve there always lurks some crafty plan.

That is bound to prove a winner; but each evening after dinner

Jones is simply this, "the weary business man."

Jones dines well, but not too wisely, and then he'll say, "My dear, What theatre shall we attend to-night?"

Now Mrs. J. likes drama, but it puts her lord to sleep;

He's partial to the "show" described as light.

So they go where toes are twinkling, feet are broad and music tinkling.

A diversion that's found on a plan Which is feminine and festive, and supposed to be quite restive.

To that jaded soul, "the weary business man."

For what's the use of thinking when office hours are past?

Away with efforts serious and sane! If Mr. Playwright wants to make a ten-strike, here's our tip—

Pass up ideals, write something that's insane.

Let the drama go to Hades; while the handsome chorus ladies

Will continue to divert as best they can.

You can bet your bottom dollar that this sort of "show" will collar

The attention of "the weary business man."
